

MATERNITY POLICY

Introduction

This document sets out the Company's policy on maternity. It sets out the statutory rights and responsibilities of employees who are pregnant or have recently given birth and covers the arrangements for ante-natal care, pregnancy-related illness, maternity leave and pay. The Company implements the maternity rights set out in legislation.

The Company recognises that, from time to time, employees may have a question or concern relating to their maternity rights. In this respect, it is our policy to encourage open discussion between you and your line manager to ensure that questions and problems can be aired and resolved as quickly as possible. It is our policy within the Company that employees are supported throughout their pregnancy, taking into account the needs of the individual and the Company.

The maternity regulations are complex and so if you become pregnant you should clarify the relevant procedures with (name) to ensure that they are followed correctly.

The following abbreviations are used in this policy:

EWC	Expected Week of Childbirth – the week, starting on a Sunday, in which your doctor or midwife expects you to give birth.
QW	Qualifying Week – the 15th week before the EWC.
MAT B1	A certificate issued by a doctor or midwife showing the expected date of your baby's birth.

Maternity rights

In general terms, a pregnant woman has the following rights:

- Time off for ante-natal care.
- Maternity pay – linked to level of earnings.
- Maternity leave.
- Protection against unfair treatment or dismissal.

Further explanation of maternity rights is given below.

Notification of pregnancy

On becoming pregnant, you should notify your line manager as soon as you feel able to do so. This is important because there are health and safety considerations for the Company.

By the end of the Qualifying Week, or as soon as reasonably practicable afterwards, you are required to provide the following information in writing to the Company:

- That you are pregnant.
- Your EWC.
- The date on which you intend to start your maternity leave.

You must also provide your line manager with a MAT B1 form. The form must have either the doctor's name and address or the midwife's name and registration number on it.

You are permitted to bring forward your maternity leave start date, provided you advise the Company in writing at least 28 days before the new start date or, if that is not possible, as soon as reasonably practicable. You may also postpone your maternity leave start date, provided you advise the Company in writing at least 28 days before the original proposed start date or, if that is not possible, as soon as reasonably practicable.

The Company will formally respond in writing to your notification of your leave plans within 28 days, confirming the date on which you are expected to return to work if you take your full 52-week entitlement to maternity leave.

Time off for ante-natal care

Once you have advised the Company that you are pregnant, you are entitled to take reasonable paid time off work to attend ante-natal appointments as advised by your doctor, registered midwife or registered health visitor. Ante-natal care may include relaxation and parent craft classes that your doctor, midwife or health visitor has advised you to attend, in addition to medical examinations.

In order to be entitled to take time off for ante-natal care, you are required to produce a medical certificate from one of the above, stating that you are pregnant. Except in the case of the first appointment, you should also produce evidence of the appointment, such as an appointment card.

You should endeavour to give your line manager as much notice as possible of ante-natal appointments and wherever possible try to arrange them as near to the start or end of the working day as you are able.

Health and safety

The Company has a duty to take care of the health and safety of all employees. We are also required to carry out a risk assessment which may include assessing the workplace risks to women who are pregnant, have recently given birth or are breastfeeding where the work is of a kind which could involve a risk of harm or danger to their health and safety or the health and safety of their baby and the risk arises from either processes, working conditions or physical, chemical or biological agents in the workplace. If applicable, the Company will provide you with information as to any risks identified in any risk assessment. If the risk assessment reveals that you would be exposed to health hazards in carrying out your normal job duties, the Company will take such steps as are reasonably necessary to avoid those risks, such as altering your working conditions. In some cases, this may mean offering you suitable alternative work (if available) on terms and conditions which are not substantially less favourable.

If it is not possible for the Company to alter your working conditions to remove the risks to your health and there is no suitable alternative work available to offer you on a temporary basis, the Company may suspend you from work on maternity grounds until such time as there are no longer any risks to your health. This may be for the remainder of your pregnancy until the commencement of your maternity leave. If you are suspended in these circumstances, your employment will continue during the period of the suspension and it does not in any way affect your statutory or contractual employment and maternity rights. You will be entitled to receive your normal salary and contractual benefits during the period of your suspension, unless you have unreasonably refused an offer of suitable alternative employment.

Sickness absence

If you are absent from work during your pregnancy due to sickness, you will receive sick pay in the same manner as any other sickness absence provided that you have not yet begun ordinary maternity leave. If, however, you are absent from work due to a pregnancy-related illness after the beginning of the fourth week before the EWC but before the date you have notified, or before you have notified a date, on which you intend to commence your maternity leave, your maternity leave will usually start automatically on the day after the first day of your absence.

If you are absent from work wholly or partly because of pregnancy during the four weeks before the EWC, you must notify the Company in writing of this as soon as reasonably practicable.

Maternity leave

All pregnant employees are entitled to take up to 26 weeks' ordinary maternity leave (OML) and up to 26 weeks' additional maternity leave (AML), making a total of 52 weeks. This is regardless of the number of hours worked or length of service. AML begins on the day after OML ends.

OML can start at any time after the beginning of the 11th week before your EWC (unless your child is born prematurely before that date). Maternity leave will start on whichever date is the earlier of:

- Your chosen start date.
- The day after you give birth.
- The day after any day on which you are absent for a pregnancy-related reason in the four weeks before the EWC.

If you give birth before your maternity leave was due to start, you must notify the Company in writing of the date of the birth as soon as reasonably practicable.

The law obliges all employees to take a minimum of two weeks of compulsory maternity leave immediately after the birth of their child (four weeks for factory workers).

Ordinary maternity leave (OML)

During the period of OML, your contract of employment continues in force and you are entitled to receive all your contractual benefits, except for salary. In particular, any benefits in kind (such as life assurance, private medical insurance, permanent health insurance, private use of a company car or laptop and gym membership) will continue, contractual annual leave entitlement will continue to accrue and pension contributions will continue to be made. Your pension contributions will be based on the amount of actual pay you are receiving whilst the Company's contributions will be based on the salary you would have received had you not gone on maternity leave (i.e. it will continue to make any employer contributions that it usually makes). You may wish to increase your own contributions to make good any shortfall whilst you are in receipt of less than your usual salary.

Salary will be replaced by statutory maternity pay (SMP) if you are eligible to receive it.

On resuming work after maternity leave, you will be entitled to benefit from any general pay increases that may have been awarded in your absence.

You are encouraged to take any outstanding annual leave due to you before the commencement of OML. You are reminded that, as a general rule, holiday should normally be taken in the year that it is earned and therefore if the holiday year is due to end during maternity leave, you should try to take the full year's entitlement before starting your maternity leave.

Additional maternity leave (AML)

During the period of AML, your contract of employment again continues in force and, as is the case during the period of OML, you are entitled to receive all your contractual benefits, except for salary. Any benefits in kind will continue and contractual annual leave entitlement will continue to accrue.

Salary will be replaced by SMP for the first 13 weeks of AML if you are eligible to receive it. The remaining 13 weeks of AML will be unpaid.

During the period of paid AML (i.e. when you are still receiving SMP), your pension contributions will be based on the amount of actual pay you are receiving whilst the Company's contributions will be based on the salary you would have received had you not gone on maternity leave. You may wish to increase your own contributions to make good any shortfall whilst you are in receipt of less than your usual salary. However, unless the pension scheme rules or your contract of employment provide otherwise, the Company will not make contributions during any period of unpaid AML. Subject to the pension scheme rules, you may make member contributions during this time.

Statutory maternity pay (SMP)

SMP is payable for up to 39 weeks during maternity leave. You are entitled to SMP if:

- You have been continuously employed by the Company for at least 26 weeks at the end of the QW and you are still employed during that week.
- Your average weekly earnings in the eight weeks up to and including the QW are not less than the lower earnings limit for National Insurance contributions.
- You are still pregnant 11 weeks before the start of your EWC (or have already given birth).
- You provide a MAT B1 form stating your EWC.
- You give the Company proper notification of your pregnancy in accordance with the rules set out above.

For the first six weeks, SMP is paid at the higher rate, which is equivalent to 90% of your average weekly earnings calculated over the period of eight weeks up to and including the QW. For the purpose of calculating average weekly earnings, shift allowances, overtime payments, bonuses and commission are all included.

The standard rate of SMP is paid for the remaining 33 weeks (or less if you decide to return to work sooner). This is paid at a rate set by the Government for the relevant tax year, or 90% of your average weekly earnings calculated over the period of eight weeks up to and including the QW if this is lower than the Government's set weekly rate.

If you become eligible for a pay rise between the start of the original calculation period and the end of your maternity leave (whether OML or AML), the higher or standard rate of SMP will be re-calculated to take account of your pay rise, regardless of whether SMP has already been paid. This means your SMP will be re-calculated and increased retrospectively, or that you may qualify for SMP if you did not previously. You will be paid a lump sum to make up any difference between SMP already paid and the amount payable as a result of the pay rise.

SMP is treated as earnings and is therefore subject to PAYE and National Insurance deductions.

SMP is paid into your bank account in the same way as salary is normally paid.

Payment of SMP cannot start prior to the 11th week before your EWC. SMP can start from any day of the week in accordance with the date you start your maternity leave.

SMP is payable whether or not you intend to return to work after your maternity leave.

It is important for maternity pay purposes that you notify your line manager if, during the maternity pay period, you are taken into legal custody or start to work for another employer.

Maternity allowance

If you have been working for the Company for less than 26 weeks at the QW, you are not eligible to receive SMP. You may, however, be able to apply to the Department for Work and Pensions for maternity allowance if you meet their qualifying conditions.

Contact during maternity leave

Shortly before your maternity leave starts, the Company will discuss the arrangements for you to keep in touch during your leave, should you wish to do so. The Company reserves the right in any event to maintain reasonable contact with you from time to time during your maternity leave. This may be to discuss your plans for return to work, to discuss any special arrangements to be made or training to be given to ease your return to work or simply to update you on developments at work during your absence.

Keeping in touch days

Except during the first two weeks from childbirth, you may agree to work for the Company for up to a maximum of ten days during either your OML or AML without that work bringing the period of your maternity leave to an end and without loss of a week's SMP. These are known as 'keeping in touch' days. Any work carried out on a day constitutes a day's work for these purposes.

The Company has no right to require you to carry out any work, and you have no right to undertake any work, during your maternity leave. Any work undertaken, including the amount of salary paid for any work done on keeping in touch days, is entirely a matter for agreement between the Company and you. Any keeping in touch days worked do not extend the period of your maternity leave. Once the keeping in touch days have been used up, you will lose a week's SMP for any week in which you agree to work for the Company.

Returning to work

You will have been formally advised in writing by the Company of the date on which you are expected to return to work if you take your full 52-week entitlement to maternity leave. You are expected to return on this date, unless you notify the Company otherwise. If you are unable to attend work at the end of your maternity leave due to sickness or injury, the Company's normal arrangements for sickness absence will apply. In any other case, late return without prior authorisation will be treated as unauthorised absence.

Whilst you are under no obligation to do so, it would assist the Company if you could confirm as soon as convenient during your maternity leave that you will be returning to work as expected.

If you wish to return to work earlier than your expected return date, you must give the Company, preferably in writing, at least eight weeks' notice of your proposed date of early return. If you fail to do so, the Company may postpone your return to such a date as will give the Company eight weeks' notice, provided that this is not later than your expected return date.

If you decide not to return to work at all after maternity leave, you must give notice of resignation as soon as possible and in accordance with the terms of your contract of employment. If the notice period would expire after your maternity leave has ended, the Company may require you to return to work for the remainder of your notice period.

Shared parental leave

Where your EWC is on or after 5 April 2015 and you give notice to end your maternity leave early and to formally opt in to the shared parental leave scheme instead, you may then be eligible to share the balance of your leave (and pay) with your spouse, civil partner or cohabiting partner, or the father of your child (if they are also eligible) as shared parental leave (and statutory shared parental pay, if applicable). Shared parental leave is available for up to 52 weeks, reduced by the number of weeks of maternity leave you have taken (the compulsory maternity leave period must still be taken). It is up to you and your spouse or partner to agree between yourselves the amount of shared parental leave each of you will take, assuming you are both eligible, as long as the total time taken does not exceed the maximum permitted between you.

Shared parental leave can also be taken consecutively or concurrently but it must start no earlier than the date on which your baby is born and it must end no later than 12 months after the date of childbirth. You can also apply to take discontinuous blocks of shared parental leave. If you wish to consider shared parental leave, further details can be obtained from (name).

Rights on and after return to work

On resuming work after OML, you are entitled to return to the same job as you occupied before commencing maternity leave on the same terms and conditions of employment as if you had not been absent.

On resuming work after AML, again you are entitled to return to the same job as you occupied before commencing maternity leave on the same terms and conditions of employment as if you had not been absent. If, however, it is not reasonably practicable for the Company to allow you to return to the same job, the Company may offer you suitable alternative work, on terms and conditions that are no less favourable than would have applied if you had not been absent.

If you worked full-time prior to your maternity leave you have no automatic right to return to work on a part-time basis or to make other changes to your working patterns. However, all requests for part-time work or other flexible working arrangements will be considered in line with the operational requirements of the Company's business. If you would like this option to be considered, you should write to your line manager setting out your proposals as soon as possible in advance of your return date (preferably at least three months in advance), so that there is adequate time for full consideration of the request. The procedure for making a flexible working application is set out in the Company's flexible working policy.

Time off to accompany to ante-natal appointments

From 1 October 2014, your spouse, civil partner or partner who lives with you in an enduring family relationship (but is not your relative), or the father of your expected baby, is entitled to take unpaid time off work in order that they may accompany you to an ante-natal appointment made on the advice of a registered medical practitioner, registered midwife or registered nurse. This is limited to a maximum of two appointments, with the maximum time off during working hours for each appointment being no more than 6.5 hours.

Your spouse's or partner's employer can request them to sign a declaration in this regard which states that they have a qualifying relationship with you or your expected baby, they are taking the time off to accompany you to an ante-natal appointment made on the advice of a registered medical practitioner, registered midwife or registered nurse and the date and time of the appointment. However, no evidence of your pregnancy or your ante-natal appointment needs to be provided to their employer. If you are a surrogate mother, this right also applies to the intended parent if they are the potential applicant for a parental order.

Further details should be obtained from your spouse's or partner's employer.

Need friendly advice right now or more information? No problem. We'll take care of it. Contact us on 0345 351 0073 or elxtr@lhs-solicitors.com

From now on, your future could be in the expert hands of our award-winning, experienced legal team. We're ready to help.

elXtr
Real law made easy

Please note: Simply Business have teamed up with elXtr to bring you a free, customisable legal document. Simply Business are one of the UK's biggest small business insurance providers, insuring over 400,000 self-employed people and landlords. Because this is a template document, it hasn't been drafted to meet your individual requirements and it doesn't constitute legal advice from LHS Solicitors LLP to you. As well as filling in the obvious gaps (e.g. relevant names and dates), so that you can personalise it for your own use, you might also want to make your own changes to it. Depending on your particular circumstances, it might not contain everything that you need. If you do decide to adapt it in any way, the changes you make are your sole responsibility. Whilst this document isn't intended to replace the personalised, professional advice you can receive from a solicitor, if you have any questions about it and/or would like legal advice in relation to matters covered by this template document, we can of course help you. All you need to do is get in touch and we'll talk you through your options on how to get the right legal advice and ensure the document is fully tailored to fit your own requirements. As you'd expect with template materials and general guidance from any similar source to eIXtr (a brand owned by LHS Solicitors LLP), we don't accept responsibility for any action you might take in relation to documentation provided by us. (We're also obliged to point out that to the fullest extent permitted by law, and except in respect of death or personal injury arising from our negligence, we exclude liability for any claims, loss, demands or damages of any kind whatsoever with respect to this document including, without limitation, direct, indirect, incidental or consequential loss or damages, whether arising from loss of profits, loss of revenue, loss of data, loss of use or otherwise and whether or not the possibility of such loss has been notified to us.)